

The River & the Tree

The tall oak tree stands so proudly,
Its branches reaching to the clouds,
Its leaves sway gently in the breeze,
Whispering secrets amongst them.

Quietly a river extended amongst the trees

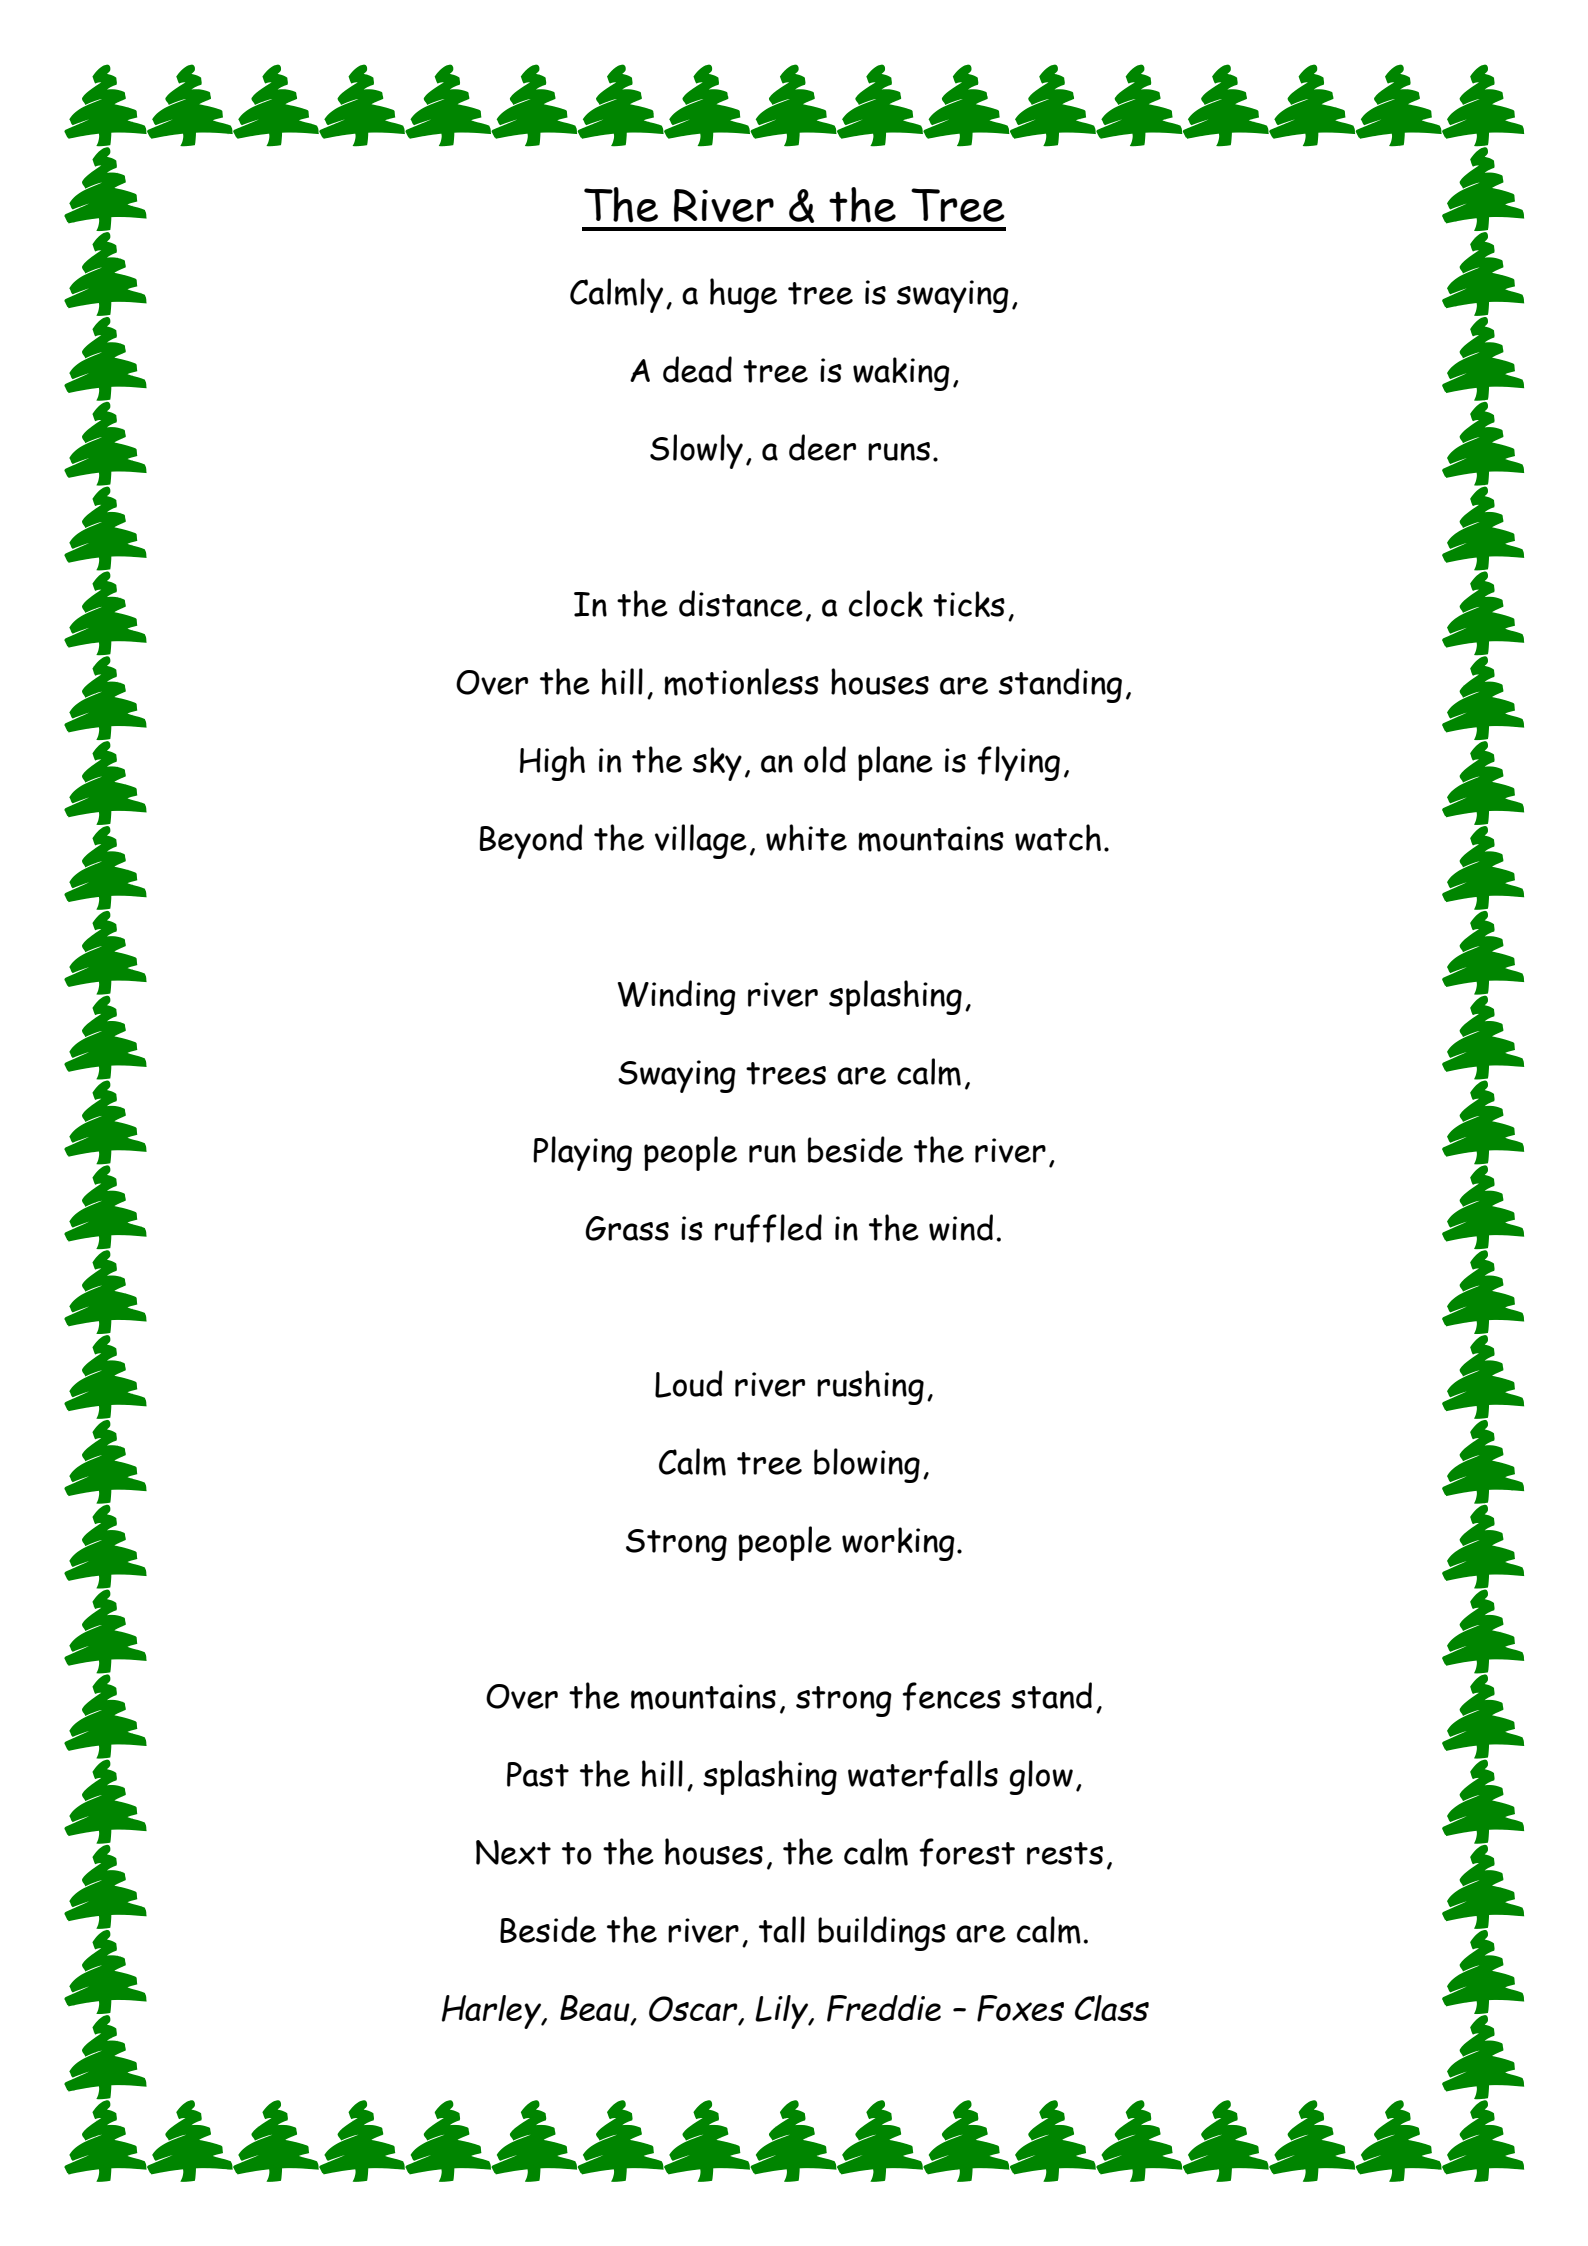

A house stood in front of a river,
Homes stood opposite the trees.

Grey smoke wafted through the village,
A steam train trundled through,
A wet boat drifted along the river,
An old tree bends over the water.

The tall oak tree stands so proud,
Branches reaching to the clouds,
Leaves sway gently in the breeze,
Whispering secrets.

Green grass grows below the sky,
Dark green trees blow in the breeze,
Grey mountains tower over the land.

The River & the Tree

Calmly, a huge tree is swaying,

A dead tree is waking,

Slowly, a deer runs.

In the distance, a clock ticks,

Over the hill, motionless houses are standing,

High in the sky, an old plane is flying,

Beyond the village, white mountains watch.

Winding river splashing,

Swaying trees are calm,

Playing people run beside the river,

Grass is ruffled in the wind.

Loud river rushing,

Calm tree blowing,

Strong people working.

Over the mountains, strong fences stand,

Past the hill, splashing waterfalls glow,

Next to the houses, the calm forest rests,

Beside the river, tall buildings are calm.

The Tree & the River

Silently, the old green leaves were rustling,
Beside the river, the deer was sitting,
The rising land was blossoming in the sun.

Crowded, the gloomy town sits miserably,
Quietly, the waving banners swing in the wind,
The sad, crowded city is waiting,
The sad tree blooms in the wind.

Metal train track turning,
Brown tree growing,
Massive airship floating

The abandoned city sits in the background,
Multiple boats race to escape the destruction,
Scared people wonder if they will survive.

A healthy tree is waiting in the wind,
Slow river leading through the mountains,
Green grass waving beside the river,
Huge mountains are standing still.
